

Braceria elvetica

History

Three long-time friends, three colleagues from different regions of a country rich in food and wine treasures, three professionals of the hospitality art: from here our story begins!

We fantasized about opening an innovative restaurant, an exclusive in the entire Ticino area, a place to eat quality meat, cooked in the best way and all at a sensational price.

And that's how the idea of BRACERIA ELVETICA was born!

A great project, born walking through the stands of a sector fair, has now become reality. However, one fundamental element was missing: the butcher!

We needed a partner who would supply us with meat, work it and leave it without ever neglecting its properties and who, like us, shared the passion for hospitality, for quality and for research.

Mr. Giorgio Campora was the right person. Butcher expert and lover of tradition, but always attentive to the market and its continuous evolution.

There you go! BRACERIA is a place where you can travel along the paths of Swiss meat, through the history and regulations that make this product something exceptional.

We will introduce you to the breeders, their history and the history of the Swiss territories where, for generations, these artisans have been working hard to guarantee one superior quality standards that you can enjoy in your dishes.

Join us on this extraordinary journey within BRACERIA ELVETICA!

The Maturation

The matured meat with the "dry aging" method takes on a very intense external coloring and loses weight compared to its initial state due to dehydration.

This process intervenes directly on the structure of the meat in two different ways.

First, moisture evaporates from the muscle.

The resulting drying process creates greater concentration of flavor and of the taste of beef. Secondly, the action of natural beef enzymes breaks down the connective tissue in the muscle, resulting in softer steaks.

Each animal, cut and size has a different time and a different maturation method.

And this is how a necessity turns into art.

The Marbling

It is a property of meat that indicates the distribution of fat inside the muscle tissue.

The meat, depending on the quantity and the form with which the fat infiltrates into the fibers, may have veins similar to those of marble (hence the term marbled meat), or patches similar to tiny parsley leaves (hence the term parsley meat).

Typically used in gastronomy, this property is an index of meat quality (assessed on a scale from 1 to 12):

given that the amount of fat derives from the state of health and the type of feeding of the animal, the higher the degree of marbling and the more valuable the cut of meat will be.

Furthermore, during cooking, the finely distributed fat melts, giving the meat flavor, fragrance and softness.

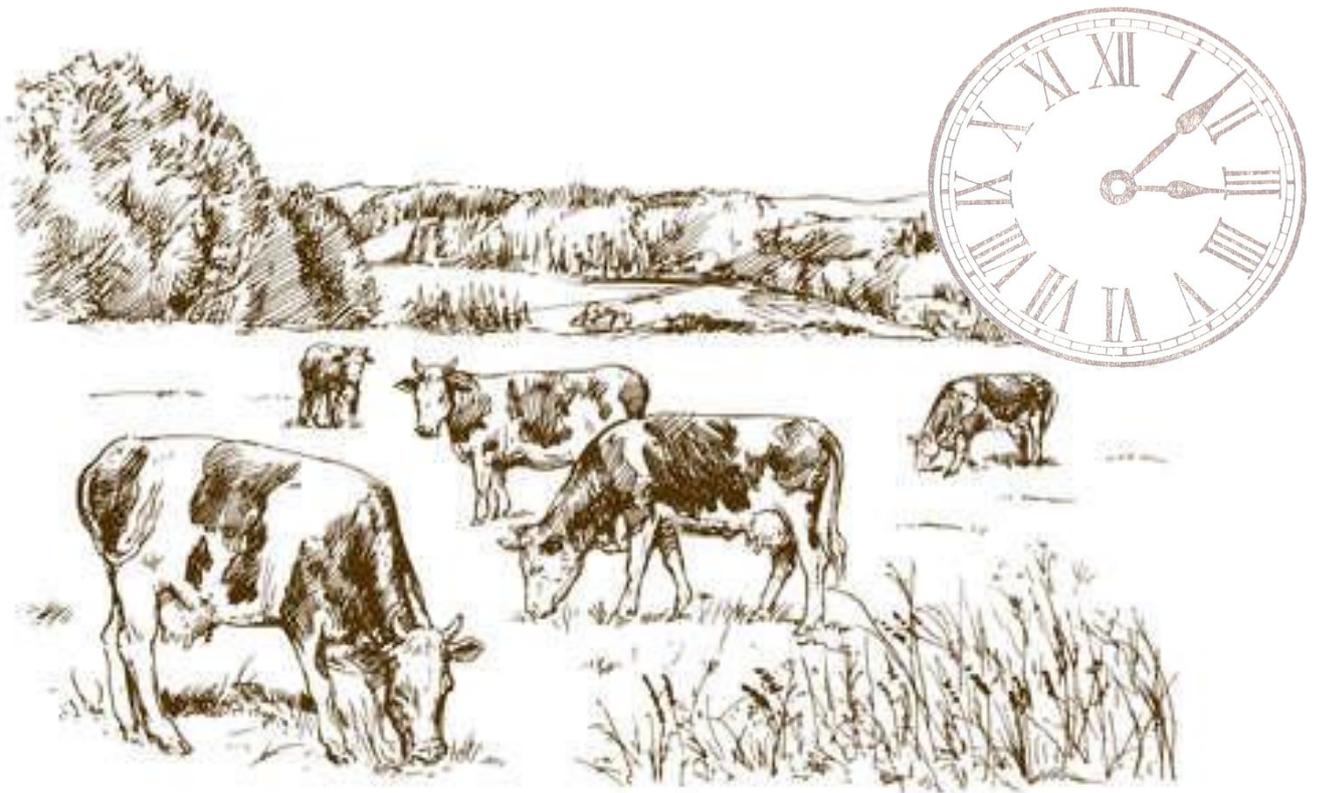

The Time

One of the most precious goods for us, it is even more important for meat.
For every moment of its processing, the meat needs the right time and meticulous care.

After slaughtering, the meat needs the right aging time e before cooking there is a time of oxygenation that must be respected and which varies depending on the duration of the maturation.

After cooking the meat must rest. This phase is called the "Rest period" by the great masters of the BBQ and allows the redistribution of the liquids and more effectively dissolving the connective tissue, in order to transmit all the flavor from the fat to the meat.

THE SWISS MEAT

There are many reasons for choosing Swiss meat.

Geographically, our Country is suitable for animal husbandry and provides farmers with the natural resources they need for animal welfare. Also, the Confederation and the cantons have laws to ensure a high level of animal welfare and food safety.

From the Butcher's shop our selection of meats by weight

Our butcher Giorgio Campora selects daily, slaughters and prepares the specialties that you can find in our showcase.

We decided to enhance Swiss meat, without neglecting excellences come from the rest of the world.

You can choose both the cut and the weight of your favorite meat and our Chefs they will be happy to serve you respecting the cooking and resting times required based on the type of maturation.
